Indian Black Salve – External Use

READ CAREFULLY

Indian Black Salve is a powerful healer. In many cases, it is a relentless substance that hunts down and penetrates abnormal tissues. Some discomfort, itching and redness may occur. It will not affect normal skin cells, as it has a unique ability to discern between healthy and abnormal tissue. It is often used as both a diagnostic tool and a skin cancer remedy. It is advisable to try the salve in a place other than your face on the first application, so you can experience the process and its function.

The following are recommendations based on what many users have found to be effective. Usually only one application is needed. More application of salve will extend the healing period longer than necessary.

- Apply a sufficient amount of salve to cover the affected area. If possible, leave the uncovered salve on for 8 to 12 hours. Otherwise, cover with bandage. If cancer or virus is present, a dark scab will most likely begin to form.
- At the end of 12 hours, wash off any remaining salve. If the salve has penetrated the skin, a grayish ring will start to form around the core area, usually within 1-2 days. Outside the grayish ring, a tender, reddish area will appear. This indicates the process is working normally. The gray ring must encompass the core in order for the core to separate from the body. Some have mistaken the gray ring to be an infection. It is not. It must be left undisturbed in order for the core to separate.
- The core will loosen as the treated area works its way out on its own, usually within 7-12 days. The gray ring will begin to ooze out on its own, a further indication that the process is working normally. If the core is removed prematurely, it may bleed and a second application may be necessary.
- After the core comes out, new skin will already have formed. When the core comes out, there may be an indentation that will fill in gradually over the next few weeks. Keep clean and soft with aloe vera or vitamin E oil until the core area has healed.

VARIOUS USES OF THE SALVE

The following information describes some of the different uses for the NAI Salve & VBF Tablets.

- Use for treatment of mouth lesions, diseased gums, and for removal of plaque from teeth. Apply a matchhead-sized portion of salve along with toothpaste and brush teeth, gums and tongue once daily for 7 to 10 days. Repeat as needed.
- Mix a small amount of salve in a spray bottle and use for solving foot fungus problems. Mix enough for three days. (It will last longer but you may not need it.)
- For warts, remove top hard layer of wart, then apply salve. Use a pin and prick around the perimeter for better penetration of salve. Warts sometimes peel off in layers and may require a second and even a third application.
- Sore throat – Gargle and swallow a small pea-sized amount of salve added to two ounces of water. Repeat as needed.

PROPER CARE OF PRODUCT

- Keep salve from making contact with metal objects, which tend to neutralize the product. Use a wood or plastic instrument when handling the salve.
- The salve in the container should last for many years. Add a drop or two of water if salve becomes dry. A moist paste is most effective for application purposes.

INGREDIENTS

Red Clover, Bloodroot, Galangal, and Sheep Sorrel mixed in the proper proportion with a mineral binder to maximize results.
